REQUIRED Summer Reading Texts:

Yann Martel's Life of Pi (Canadian 2001)

Sandra Cisneros's The House on Mango Street (American 1984)

- You may read these novels in print (new or used) or electronic versions.
- You must purchase your own copies of the two novels.
- Both novels are required reading. Please do not pick just one – you absolutely must read them both.
- If you have already read these novels, reread them.
- You are not required to send me a postcard, or an email, or communicate with me in any way over the summer when you have completed the books.
- There will be an exam made up of short answer questions over both novels.
- The summer reading test is a crucial part of your first quarter grade.
- The summer reading test will be administered during the first full week of classes – quite likely on the Monday of that week.
- Any reading notes you personally take over the novels can be used on the test you will take in August.
- Please avoid all internet sites that offer literary interpretations, summaries, theories, and analysis, such as SparkNotes. Please do your own reading and your own thinking.
- I highly recommend starting your reading early and starting your reading with Life of Pi. Please break up the reading and do it with great care. DO read "Author's Note" because it is the start of the novel. "Author" is the writer of all the chapters in italics.
- You are welcome to watch the movie version of Life of Pi, but keep in mind it leaves out large parts of the novel. I do not recommend reading it in place of the novel.
